The English nation has entered upon a struggle of paramount importance and of peculiar interest. After nearly forty years of repose it has engaged in a war which involves the peace of Europe. But the question is of still larger import; for if the interest of Europe is hound up in it, the destinies and future condition of Asia actually depend upon it. The power of Russia, growing with a startling rapidity, and ever exercised in the support of conquest and despotism, has excited the greatest apprehensions in the cabinets of Europe. Russia is essentially a military power, and aggression on the territory of its neighbours is almost coeval with its history as a nation: the designs of its rulers upon the possessions of the Ottoman, have descended from one sovereign to another as a sort of political heirloom. The...
