See also Fuller, Church History. 2 Heylyn s History of the Reformation, p. 96, London, 1660. Dean Stanley, referring to Machyn s Diary, says Abbot Feckenham was deprived January 4th, 1559-60, i.e. six months later. See Camden s Annals of the Reign of Queen Elizabeth. custody of the Bishop of Ely, and finally, three years afterwards, consigned to the vile and foetid prison vilem et f tidem carcerem) in Wisbeach Castle, in the Isle of Ely, a most unhealthy place, where, in 1585, he closed his eyes on the troubles of earth.1 To the last he was zealous in good works. In 1576 he built a hospital at Bath for the poor and afflicted; he also made a causeway across the difficult fen country, and in his last will he remembered the poor who lived near the dismantled walls of his own Abbey of Evesham. He was buried in the parish churchyard of Wisbeach, without the ancient rites or any memorial stone. Of the after-life of his companion-monks there is little to record. Of two only is there any definite information forthcoming. Austin Ringwode, we are told, having the fear of God before his eyes, though turned out of his old home (Glastonbury), dwelt in a cottage at no great distance from it, where through many long years he constantly observed his old rule, without relaxation. Towards the close of his life it is recorded that he was solaced with visions...
